ATLANTIS.

A Ship-Captain's Strange Discovery in the Atlantic.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., April 24.—The British steamship Jesmond has arrived at this port from Messina with a cargo of fruit. Captain Robson reports a remarkable discovery. He says that about two hundred miles to the westward of Madeira his attention was called to the singular appearance of the sea. The water had a dark, muddy look, and was covered with dead fish as far as the eye could reach. They were of several species, among them being noticed mullet, cod and bass. Soon after entering this field of dead fish he observed a faint smoke on the horizon nearly ahead on the course of the vessel.

Early next morning the captain was awakened by the second officer, and informed that land had been sighted in the course of the steamer. He was greatly surprised at this information, knowing that there was no land in this part of the Atlantic. Upon going on deck, however, he found that the report was correct. The dim outlines of an island, broken by mountain peaks, were visible even without the use of a glass. Above it hung a cloud of smoke. The water was more turbid than on the previous day, and the shoal of dead fish thicker.

Captain Robson deemed it advisable to take soundings, not expecting, however, to get bottom, as the charts show a depth of from two thousand to three thousand fathoms in that portion of the Atlantic. For some time the sounding was without result, suddenly the line brought bottom at fifty fathoms. When about four leagues distant from the island the Jesmond came to anchor in seven fathoms of water. The island was located 25 degrees 40 minutes west, 25 degrees north. Captain Robson determined to make an exploration of the strange land. The yawl was lowered and the captain and one of his officers were rowed to the island. A landing was effected on the low coast of the western border, where a convenient harbor was found for the yawl. The captain and several of the crew with some difficulty ascended the declivity. The promontory seemed several miles in length, and joined an extensive plateau, which sloped gently back to a chain of mountains at a great distance off, from which rose light columns of smoke. The surface of the ground was covered with pumice stone, and volcanic debris, and entirely destitute of vegetation. It was a desolate scene, where not a single living thing was perceived.

The captain and his company started on a tour inland, but soon found their progress impeded by yawning chasms. It was, therefore, determined to return to the beach and inspect the island from that side. While examining the base of the cliff where the rock was fractured and twisted as if by some tremendous convulsion, and disclosed a bed of breccia, a surprising discovery was made by one of the sailors. On thrusting the prong of a boathook into the loosened mass of gravel, he dislodged a stone arrowhead. Excited by this incident, the search was continued, and other articles of stone were discovered. A large excavation was made, and it was ascertained that the opening led between the crumbling remains of what must have been massive walls.

A number of articles were exhumed, such as bronze swords, rings, hammers, carvings of heads and figures of birds and animals, and two vases or jars with fragments of bones, and one cranium almost entire.

The most singular thing brought to view was what appeared to be a mummy, contained in a stone case. It was so incrustated with volcanic deposits as to be scarcely distinguished from the rock itself. Much difficulty was experienced in dislodging the sarcophagus, which was finally taken out whole, and, with the fossils, transported to the steamer.

Captain Robson would have continued this investigation, but as the aspect of the weather became less favorable, and he could not afford to spend more time at the island, he sailed for this port. He considers that the new island was raised from the sea by volcanic action, and that the fish were killed by the poisonous gases from the volcano. The captain thinks that the new land is a section of the immense ridge known to exist in the Atlantic, and of which the Azores and Canaries are a part. He took pleasure in exhibiting the fossils and curious articles of which he was the fortunate finder. The carved heads are in the Egyptian style of sculpturing, being distinguished by the veil or hood which characterizes Egyptian figures. The urns and vases are spherical, with large mouths, and upon them may be discerned inscriptions in hieroglyphics. The edges of the axes and arrow or spearheads are blunted and jagged. The sword is a straight weapon of bronze, with a cross-hilt. Captain Robson proposes to send the relics to the British Museum at London, upon his return to Liverpool.

Dowry of a Hindoo Bride.

One of the daughters of Meer Goolam Baba, Nawab, of Surat, is about to be married at Surat. The procession which carried the bride's dowry to the bridegroom's house was worthy of special mention. A number of elephants, horses, carriages and palkees led the procession. After them came a number of female servants, all in snow-white clothes, each bearing in her hands a covered tray. About fifty youths followed with rose-water decanters of silver on silver salvers. Then came five hundred colliers, some with magnificent bedsteads, with curtains, pillows, &c.; others with swings, benches, boxes, cupboards of various designs, sofas, chairs, tables, and, in short, all the paraphernalia of a modern house. These were followed by seventy-five women, each carrying a tray of sweetmeats. One hundred men with cooking utensils brought up the rear. Some of these men carried on their heads basket-loads of lamps, wall-shades, chandeliers, &c.

The Paris Register relates this romantic history: "Some twenty years ago a poorly-clad boy entered the office of the secretary of the Society of Fine Arts at Pesth, and asked to see the incumbent. He was told by a clerk that the important functionary was absent. 'Never mind,' said the boy, 'he would not know me if he were here, and I might just as well leave my petition with you. I should be glad of some pecuniary aid to enable me to pursue my career as an artist, and I beg you to say a good word for me to the secretary.' The society had a meeting a few days later, and the secretary on re-entering the office, said to the clerk: 'I advocated the case of your protege—he has had sixty florins granted him. What is the formula usually put in the protocol?' 'A mediocre talent,' was the reply. 'Well, then, write: A mediocre talent, to which not more than sixty florins could be granted.' The young aspirant took the money and went to Vienna, where, but a few weeks after, he exhibited a painting for which he received 120 florins. This first success was reported to the society at Pesth, and on hearing of it the secretary remarked: 'That young fellow seems to have had more in him than we thought.' The 'mediocre talent' of twenty years ago is now the laurel-crowned hero of Pesth—his name is Michael Munkacsy."

THE American Government is at present constructing some iron lighthouses. One of them, which is nearly finished, is at White Rock, Narragansett Bay. It is made of iron, and consists of a pile-work foundation in three sections, each about six feet high, with forty piles for each section. The lighthouse, which is erected above the pile work, consists of four sections, and is surmounted with the lantern. The height of the whole construction is about sixty-three feet above the level of the water. Other iron lighthouses are to be constructed at Connecticut and at Border Flatts, Fall River.

Georgia will lose two able men in those two gentlemen but has General Gordon, Governor Colquitt, General Jackson and others to fall back upon.

SMALLPOX is alarmingly on the increase in Cincinnati and is doing incalculable damage to the trade of the city. The Gazette lays the blame for the spread of the pestilence at the door of the Board of Health, which it charges with inefficiency and corruption, and calls for a reorganization of that body. Fifty-one new cases were reported in one day. This is certainly a large number, and the situation evidently demands vigorous measures.

The Republican majority in the House of Representatives has been increased by two votes, by the seating of Lynch in Chalmers' place, thus reducing the Democratic vote by one and adding one to the Republican vote. Lynch is now the only representative of the colored race in congress; and the only one that has been in congress since senator Bruce, of Mississippi, left the senate more than a year ago. The newly seated congressman is a mulatto of very light color, with a face that is decidedly more Caucasian than African in its features. He argued his own case with great ability, and received the entire vote of the Republican majority and one democratic vote, that of Mr. Ellis, of Louisiana, and was sworn in with a great demonstration of applause from the Republican side of the House. The Democrats lose one of their readiest and most brilliant debaters in Gen. Chalmers.

In the course of discussion in the Senate Wednesday afternoon, on the question of printing the report of the Secretary of War showing how so much money was used for traveling and similar purposes in the army, Senator Plumb said that thing of ordering army officers from one place to another that they might visit their families or sweethearts, had become an outrage and should be stopped. He said it was very nice for an officer to have an order to visit a place he wanted to visit because that order provided for all his expenses. There was no necessity for so many officers here in Washington. He thought that when the department exceeded the amount allowed by Congress for such expenses, it ought to be the subject of Congressional investigation.

THE Scientific American gives the following as a durable whitewash: For one barrel of color wash, half a bushel white lime, three pecks of hydraulic cement, ten pounds umber, ten pounds ochre, one pound Venetian red, quarter pound lampblack. Slake the lime; cut the lampblack with vinegar; mix well together; add the cement and fill the barrel with water. Let it stand twelve hours before using, and stir frequently while putting it on. This is not white, but of a light stone color, without the unpleasant glare of white. The color may be changed by adding more or less of the colors. This wash covers well, needing only one coat, and is superior to anything known, excepting oil paint.

The costumes have been ordered from Cincinnati, and the affair will create quite a sensation. Rooms have been engaged at the hotels for guests from abroad.

THE Ashland Express says:

Last week we spoke of the discovery of splendid oil on Kentucky, White Creek, on the land of Mr. Miller. Since then, a number of our citizens have expressed their doubts in regard to it, thinking perhaps it is a put up job for speculation.

Determined to satisfy ourselves by a personal examination; on Monday we visited the spring and found the oil still running, and we are satisfied there has been no attempt to deceive any one. The spring is near the foot of a big hill, and the oil issues from beneath a large ledge of rock, and it would be utterly out of the power of the shrewdest man in the world to attempt to commit a fraud. The oil as it issues from the rock is apparently pure as refined petroleum, having, however, a heavier body, and burns equal to the best headlight oil. It is a beautiful light amber color. We have a specimen of it in our office, which we saw collected from the spring, and all who desire to see it can call at our sanctum, and see for themselves the most splendid specimen of crude oil that ever issued from the earth.

SOME new wheat which was sown near Americus, Ga., on the 26th of November, 1881, harvested April 7th, 1882, and yielding twenty bushels to the acre, was exhibited at Cincinnati a few days ago.

THE mortgage on the Mt. Sterling coal road has been cancelled and there is now no indebtedness on the road. It will probably soon be extended to the coal fields of Morgan county, says the Mt. Sterling Sentinel.

THE speech of Col. Breckinridge in the turnpike case is spoken of as a very able and eloquent effort. The case was given to the jury about four o'clock yesterday afternoon but up to this time a verdict has not been rendered.

MULL dresses, with many polka-dotted and scalloped flounces, the round full waist set off with a broad sash of white faille or moire antique, are suggested as the prettiest attire for sweet girl graduates on commencement day.

YESTERDAY afternoon, Wm. Musick, a prisoner at the jail for carrying a concealed deadly weapon, escaped while the door was opened for cleaning up the building. He was afterward captured on Newdigate's hill and returned to his cell.

UNTIL recently, there stood on the Kentucky bank of the Ohio river, about a mile above Vanceburg, an immense poplar tree. It was nearly nine feet in diameter at the base, and sixty-eight feet to the first limb. Many years ago a steamboat passenger going down the river, was so struck with this large tree that he bought it, paying Mr. Burris, then the proprietor, a twenty-dollar gold piece for it, with the injunction to preserve the tree for him until he should return. But he never returned, and time changed the ownership of the farm, and high water washed away the banks of the river until, to save the tree, it was cut down some time since. The floods of the past season carried the "first cut" of the old tree down to the Vanceburg landing, where it was lodged and tied up.

FASHIONS.

Brooches fasten bonnet strings.
Bronze-brown hair is the fashion.
Linings of mantles are rich and costly.
In a bonnet there is a combination of myrtle green velvet and primrose crepe.
China crape shawls, black and white, never go out of vogue for elderly women.
Dark and black straw hats will be much worn with all sorts of costumes, including very bright colored one.

Among the growing innovations in modern fashions is the wearing of velvet in all seasons, not excepting mid-summer.

The agreeable features of summer styles are prevalence of short round skirts, the absence of bustles, the variety in shapes of hats and bonnets, in costumes and colors.

The new material known as leatherette is being brought into use in numerous mechanical and ornamental applications. It is so perfect an imitation of leather that the people are utterly unaware that they are handling something other than leather itself, and its serviceable nature renders the detection still more difficult.

The bonnet of the most pronounced originality brought out this season is "London Witch." It is an immense turned-up scoop hat, brimless in the back and short and flat at the sides, an emphasized, exaggerated old style Dunstable. It is vastly becoming to piquant faces. It is trimmed with quantities of flowers or feathers or ribbons, at the option of the wearer.

How to brush velvet is a thing, easy as it seems, not known to everybody. The whole secret lies in the management of the brush. Take a hat-brush that is not too soft, but has the bristles elastic, that will return at once to their original state after being pressed aside. Hold this firmly under the palm of the hand, in the direction of the ear, and with the bristles downward; and pressing them, first, gently into the substance of the velvet; and the brush must be lifted up and placed in a similar manner over every part required to be brushed. By this means velvet will be improved, instead of deteriorated, and will last for years.

A LARGE amount of coal from the Big Sandy country was delivered at Lexington recently at ten cents a bushel. The Press says: "Our people are at length getting a large return on the cost of our railroads. At present prices of fuel, as compared with old-time prices, the saving will in a few years more than equal the original investment in railroads."

HYMEN'S ALTAR.

Some Queer Little Stories Concerning Marriages.

The sexton of one of the New York fashionable churches boasts of having received six hundred and odd dollars in wedding fees since Easter.

In New York the other day a bride's mother had the ushers move two ladies well known in society from one pew to another. The ladies naturally were indignant and left the church. Mrs. Grundy has a great deal to say about this affair that is interesting.

At a wedding reception the other day a check for $25,000, signed by the father of the bride, was among the presents displayed. The cashier of the bank upon which the check was drawn happened to be present, and he was disagreeable enough to tell the gentlemen in the wine room that the bride's father had not half that amount of money to his credit at the bank.

When Queen Victoria entered London as a bride she wore a white bonnet, which conformed with the Parisian style of the day. To every new daughter-in-law she has presented a fac-simile of this white bonnet and the piece of headgear has been worn by every one of them upon their entrance of the metropolis. The grotesqueness of style may be fancied and it is said that all the daughters-in-law have looked as miserable as widows riding in funeral processions when obliged to don the unbecoming bonnet.

There is a curious story about the refusal of a wealthy New Yorker to pay for certain bridal presents ordered by his wife. It seems that the wife ordered of a silver ware establishment $1,000 worth of presents, which were received and duly admired by the bride. But when the giver's husband received the bill he called at the jeweler's and said that the money must be collected, if at all, from the bridegroom. The silversmith applied to the bride for the return of the presents, but she refused to restore them, and the purchaser has been sued for the value of the goods. The strangest part of the affair is the husband's reasons for refusing to pay his wife's bill. It leaked out that he was once jilted by the bride upon whose table he declines to pile a thousand dollars' worth of precious metal.

A bride who was married at her father's farm house in Harford county, Md., last week, wore wild flowers at the throat and in the hair. The parlor where the ceremony was performed was decorated with flowers only—arbutus, violets, dog-tooth violets and spring beauties. In contrast was a certain wedding reception in New York whereat only wax flowers were used. "Mail and Express" of that city regrets that the flowers were melted by the heated atmosphere of the room and that several handsome toilets were ruined. In New York last week yellow cowslips, with pansies and Russian violets, were used at a wedding; in Oswego, New York, some lovely bridal bunches were of Nephets buds and lilies, and at another wedding mentioned in an exchange four bridesmaids carried hand bunches of lilacs and forget-me-nots and four bunches of lilacs and Duchess de Brabant roses.

A very novel wedding occurred at Somerset, Indiana, one day last week. It so happened that when a young couple from the country followed Hymen's torch into the village they were unable to find either a preacher or a Justice of the Peace. The swain was much excited because of the bit of bad luck and in his agony of soul asked advice of a waggish stranger whom he met. The wag, preserving a grave demeanor, told the country couple that the only official, besides the 'Squire in the village was the postmaster and told them to request that person to perform the ceremony. Since the days of Dogberry a number of official positions seem to have been set aside for the benefit of that ancient worthy's imitators. Bearing this in mind one may understand how the Somerset postmaster could listen to the bridegroom's proposition with ears pricked forward to their full length. Certain it is, if the Chicago "Times" is a truthful chronicler, that the postmaster performed the ceremony. He looked over his official instructions and failing to find any postal regulation in the matter of marriage, went through the form used by Justices, of the Peace. His concluding words were: "You are married, sir and madam, according to the postoffice laws of the United States of America."
